

BREMEN READY FOR WESTWARD ATLANTIC HOP

Poised for Flight, Junker Plane is Fueled and Provisioned

CAPT. KOEHL IS PILOT Machine Is Guarded; Weighs Five Tons Fully Loaded

DUBLIN, Mar. 27—(INS)—The Junkers monoplane Bremen, in which three German airmen will challenge the perils of a westbound trans-Atlantic flight, was overhauled, fueled and provisioned today, and made ready for the hop-off for America.

A strong westerly wind was blowing, making flying conditions unfavorable.

Capt. Herman Koehl, who will pilot the Bremen, planned to hop off at Baldonnel aerodrome at dawn tomorrow, but it was rumored that the start might be made earlier if weather conditions improved. However, the likelihood of an earlier departure seemed slim this afternoon.

Capt. Koehl and his two companions, Baron Von Huenefeld and Aviator Fritz Loose went to Baldonnel aerodrome where a special undercarriage, designed by Prof. Junkers, of the Junkers works, was fitted to the plane.

The Bremen had been kept through-out the night under guard in a sealed hangar so no one could tamper with it.

The machine was fueled with a special German petrol, brought from Tempelhof Field by two German engineers.

Keen interest has been aroused in the flight and a number of visitors went to the aerodrome during the day to get a glimpse of the plane.

DUBLIN, Mar. 27—(INS)—Surrounded by armed guards in its sealed hangar at the Baldonnel aerodrome here, the Junkers monoplane "Bremen" stood poised today for a westward hop over the Atlantic. The start will be made at five o'clock tomorrow morning with Captain Herman Koehl, Germany's foremost flier, at the controls.

Koehl will be accompanied by Fritz Loose, relief pilot, and Baron Von Huenefeld, financial backer of the flight. Huenefeld will serve as the official observer.

The fliers had intended to take-off on the dangerous and hitherto unaccomplished flight westward at dawn today but they were so fatigued by their flight from Berlin yesterday that they decided to delay their attempt.

"I hope to get away by 5 o'clock Wednesday morning," Captain Koehl said last night. "We will head for Newfoundland, and we may land there if weather conditions, and the state of our fuel supply make such a course advisable. But our goal is Mitchell Field, N. Y."

Loose arrived here several days ago with a crew of mechanics to make arrangements for the landing and refuelling of the ship. He supplants Arthur Spindler, the mechanic who flew from Berlin with Koehl as relief pilot.

LATROBE IN GRIP OF BLAZE; Damage Put At $30,000

LATROBE, Pa., Mar. 27—(INS)—Fire starting in the Paxton Livery Stable at 5 o'clock this morning started a fire that was threatening the heart of the business district here and by 6 o'clock had caused damage estimated at $30,000.

Firemen from Greensburg, Ligonier, Latrobe and Derry combined in fighting the flames.

A heavy wind blowing in an easterly direction caused serious fears that the flames would get out of control and spread over a large area in the worst disaster in the history of this town.

The Rev. Francis J. S. Morrow, who is attending the Philadelphia conference at the Olney M. E. Church with his hostess, a Mrs. Elliot, and daughter, Jane, and Mr. and Mrs. Elliot, of Olney, were visitors at the Tullytown Parsonage, on Saturday.

Rehearsals are being held in the Manning Memorial M. E. Church for the Easter program which will be held on Easter Sunday at 7.30 p. m. The service selected for the musical number is "The Triumphant Christ." A very interesting program is being arranged.

Alford Valentine and Mrs. Peggy Holden, of Atlantic City, N. J., visited S. T. Valentine and daughter this week.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Mar. 27—(INS)—Catching groundhogs is a part of the day's work for members of Engine company No. 25 here. Answering a still alarm sent from the neighborhood, the firemen were asked to capture "a large rat" which had frightened a woman. They found a fat groundhog playing in the back yard. The animal was taken to the city zoo.

BULLET THROUGH CAGE

ALLENTOWN, Mar. 27—Enraged by having been spurned and his marriage proposal rejected, Gus Weber, 65, a butcher, fired at Mrs. Ida Kemerer, widow, 40, ticket seller at the Colonial Theater.

The bullet went through the ticket seller's cage, only slightly wounded Mrs. Kemerer, but she shrieked and fell backward. Weber, evidently thinking he had fired a fatal shot, sent a ball into his own brain, falling dead on the sidewalk.

The bullet fired at Mrs. Kemerer merely grazed her upper lip and she was able, under escort, to walk to the office of a doctor nearby. She lives in an apartment in the neighborhood of Weber's meat market close by.

It is said for several years she kept him at arm's length, chiding him for his attentions. Just before Weber perpetrated his tragedy he walked up to the ticket booth and spoke to Mrs. Kemerer. As she shook her head he blazed away.

State News

PHILADELPHIA, Mar. 27—(INS)—Modern life is pagan, selfish and self-centered.

This opinion was voiced by Dr. John M. Thomas, president of Rutgers College, in a sermon delivered in Second Presbyterian Church here and he urged that people base their lives in accordance with the teachings of Christ.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Mar. 27—(INS)—The thousands of young chicks now being sent out by hatcheries all over the State must have plenty of fresh air, pure water and green food, if their owners wish to avoid heavy financial losses, the bureau of animal industry of the State Department of Agriculture, warned today.

Owners were cautioned to be on constant guard against transmissible poultry diseases which if neglected often result in wiping out entire flocks. The Department issues bulletins for the guidance of owners against the dangers of disease. In cases not easily diagnosed, the services of a good veterinarian were suggested.

HANOVER, Pa., Mar. 27—(INS)—Most of the fifty-six suitors who each have the requisite $6500 to win the hand of pretty Frances J. Felch, 19, Hanover beauty contest winner, lack one essential—they're not sincere.

That's what Miss Felch has decided after looking over the long list of applications which flooded her mailbox after she announced she would marry any man who gave her a $6500 dowry. She wants money to help her family, she says.

The beauty contest winner is afraid her Prince Charming and his bankroll will not be forthcoming in time to help, so she is answering all queries promptly. She has sent at least a dozen telegrams and letters, she says, and has made several telephone appointments to look over prospects.

Offers from Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Iowa, Tennessee and Maryland have been received, she says.

President Hiram H. Keller announced.

Dr. M. S. McDowell, a member of the Kiwanis Club of State College, and member of the International Kiwanis committee on Agriculture, was a guest last night. He brought the greetings of the State College club and was the guest of Dean C. L. Gooding, of Farm School. Dr. McDowell praised the Doylestown club for the program adopted recently by the agriculture committee.

YOUNG GIRL BURNED AS SHE COOKS MEAL

Miss Margaret Hoffman Suffers Painful Injury To Her Face

TREATED BY PHYSICIAN

A young girl was painfully burned last night as she prepared supper in her home on New Buckley street.

The injured girl is Miss Margaret Hoffman, 16, daughter of Thomas Hoffman, 631 New Buckley street.

Just what caused the accident is not as yet definitely learned but it is believed that all of the burners in the oven of a gas stove had not been lighted and that the fumes collected within the oven until Miss Hoffman opened the door and that they then burst into flames.

Miss Hoffman was preparing the evening meal for her father and brother. She had a roast in the oven and had looked at it once before. She then looked at the meat the second time and as she opened the oven door the flames burst out striking her in the face.

The young girl's face was painfully burned and it was necessary to summon a physician to dress the burns.

Tendered Reception By Members of Society

A reception was tendered Mrs. Harry Daniels, Walnut street, last evening, by the members of the Ladies' Aid of the Bristol Methodist Church, of which organization Mrs. Daniels has been treasurer for 25 years.

The retiring treasurer was presented with a beautiful bouquet of cut flowers, and following a delightful evening, refreshments were served. Many members were in attendance.

Miss Hattie Randall, of Bath street, has been selected to fill the vacancy caused by Mrs. Daniels' resignation.

Mrs. Coolidge At Bedside Of Mother; Very Ill

By Harold J. Noonan
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Mar. 27—Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, wife of the President, was at the bedside of her mother, Mrs. Lemira Goodhue, today.

The stricken mother at Dickinson-Coolidge Hospital seemed cheered by the early morning visit of her daughter, who hastened here from Washington by fast express.

Mrs. Coolidge was at the bedside of her mother from 1.45 a. m. to 2.45 a. m. Mrs. Goodhue recognized Mrs. Coolidge and the two conversed for a few moments. The rest of the time Mrs. Coolidge sat by her mother's bedside with her friend, Mrs. Rufus B. Hill, who accompanied her from Washington.

Mrs. Goodhue's condition can be considered fair but she still is a very sick woman. Her condition is somewhat improved from what it was when Mrs. Coolidge was notified to come here.

Dr. Hayes declined to hazard a guess as to how long Mrs. Goodhue might live. "Because of her age," he said, "it would not be fair to guess."

Mrs. Goodhue is 78.

SPRING IS HERE

Back for a six month's stay in the northern hemisphere, the sun escorts spring into these latitudes at Bristol. The period of the vernal equinox is always welcome and always wonderful. The rescue of the earth from the death-like grasp of winter each year is an old, old story, but an ever new one in its beauty. The other seasons have each their special loveliness, but spring has youth, freshness, a charm which its elder sisters of the year cannot rival.

Even within the stone-bound streets of the city the hardy, rowdy sparrows become turbulent with warmer blood and their matings on the house tops are done to lyrical shrieks. The parks simulate the annual resurrection of the broader countryside and reveal to city dwellers some of the beauty with which the fields beyond the city gates are decking themselves. The adventurous robin flaunts his plumage in the squares before the admiring eyes of urbanites, and man responds to the season and with quickened step and higher heart beat, about his daily round of duty. The winter is dead, spring comes and there is rejoicing among all creatures.

REDUCING THE ROLL

Since the treasury department at Washington announced a year ago that it would reduce the size of paper money as an economy measure it has discovered that the plan is more complicated than feeding smaller pieces of paper into the government presses. Obstacle after obstacle has been met and each brings another postponement of the debut of the Lilliputian bills.

First of all the bureau of printing and engraving must be equipped with new machines. That involves a considerable expense, even as Uncle Sam counts expenses. Then a plan of distribution of the new bills must be evolved. The treasury must decide whether they will appear in all denominations at once with the quantity of each limited or whether the new currency is to be adopted gradually, beginning with the smallest or highest notes and working toward the other extreme until all the old size notes have been displaced. This latter plan would permit the gradual replacement of printing machinery.

The latest delay was caused by the bankers. It has suddenly occurred to them that smaller bills will necessitate replacing some bank equipment and that the handling of large sums of money would be complicated by the circulation of two sizes of bills. European nations adapt the size of the bill to its denomination, but custom seems to have wedded the American people to uniformity.

When the diminutive notes appear on the banking counters they will find a large public demand for them, though the bankers may complain until their infallible counting finger and eye grow accustomed to catching the small one sandwiched between two large ones.

CINCINNATI LOOKS IN EXCELLENT SHAPE

Note: This is one of a series of articles by Davis J. Walsh, dealing with developments in various major league training camps. A final article of the series will follow.

By Davis J. Walsh
I. N. S. Sports Editor

ORLANDO, Fla., Mar. 27.—You probably haven't heard the one about the legless runner being beaten to a standstill, because I just made it up all by myself. Well, the Cincinnati Reds have been standing pretty still in the matter of changes in an aging personnel these several years but managerial optimism ever is rampant in the spring and so John Charles Hendricks informed me today, but before going to Tampa with his Reds, that if the club looked any better it might begin to get scared of itself or something.

It made no particular difference that its outfield is not what it was, that you can see his pitchers growing older right before your eyes and that his infield is only fair, at best. John Charles Hendricks said everything was all right and that settled it.

His story is that the other contenders have hurt themselves and the Reds are better. It is to be hoped he is right, since the Reds fell into the second division last year and, for a time, almost out of the league entirely.

And if you naturally inquire, just why will the Reds be an improvement, Hendricks will be glad to enlighten you. It seems, for instance, that last year Hughey Critz, star second baseman, held out so long he never really got started; that Carl Mays was useless after June 1, owing to an operation; that Eppa Rixey injured his wrist and was out for 30 days, the old work house interval, and that Horace Ford, shortstop, was unavailable in forty ball games.

Anyhow, he says none of these incidents are due for a repetition, although he does admit Pete Donohue is a hold-out and he does forget to mention that Peter had an unimpressive season in 1927.

Donohue, of course, will be in there sooner or later, to help round out a right good pitching staff, which includes also Mays, Rixey, Adolfo Luque, the Cuban; Frank "Jakkie" May, the Wendell, N. C. left-hander, and Fred Lucas, the flower of the flock on last year's performances. There is quite a bit of talent there, even though Rixey, Mays and Luque are getting no younger very rapidly and Donohue may not prove to be the man he was. However, Luque, the perennial, looks just as good as ever he did.

Ray Kelp, North Canton, Ohio, member of the 1927 staff, is again with us, but Hendricks is saving all of his eloquence for James C. Edwards, the Pontotoc, Miss., left-hander, drafted from Seattle. He has shown Hendricks everything a good left-hander needs and shut the St. Louis Browns right out the other day for four innings. Jim Joe closes the book for the staff.

Lawrence Arnsen, Newport, Ky., semi-pro; Ken Ash, from Petersburg, Va.; Jim Beckman, with the Reds last year; Pete Jablonowski, back again from Hartford, Conn.; Bill Miller, Chicago semi-pro, alias Edward Sweeney, or Orlando and Grenada, Miss.; Dick Wyckoff, of Springfield, Mass., and Osborne, Kans., and Harold Williams are here today and probably gone tomorrow. Anyhow Hendricks didn't seem to be unduly impressed by any of them.

He has the same three catchers, Eugene Hargrave, of St. Paul; Val Picinace, of Leonia, N. J., and Kypde Sukeforth, of Medford, Mass. George Kelly the San Francisco highboy, will play first base; Critz, one of the best in baseball, will be at second; Ford at shortstop and Charley Dessen, of Decatur, Ill., at third.

The infield substitutes are much the same. Wally Pipp again is available as utility first baseman but he hasn't long to go I gather. Clarke Pittenger, of Toledo, the inevitable substitute, again is ready for more. Emmett McCann, up again, this time from Columbus, may or may not stick. This goes, too, for John Peter White, picked up in New York and carried with the club last year.

The old Red outfield is no more. Their departure more or less leaves Curt Walker, of Beeville, Texas, Bill Zitzmann, of Nutley, N. J., and Ethan Nathan Allen, of Cincinnati, in charge. It is intimated, however, that only Walker is certain of his place because Martin Callahan, of Seattle and Norwood, Mass., and Everett Purdy, of Seattle, and Beatrice, Neb., are in there swinging and to no slight effect.

The Reds, as I see them, are just a ball club; not bad but not too good, either.

any the club stood fifth in the state out of a total of 112 clubs and in January the club stood third. The March record will place the club in the first five again.

Vice-President Carmon Ross last night inducted into membership, a new member, Charles S. Worthington, under the classification of "banking, cashier."

Next Monday night, the first meeting of the second quarter, Rev. Eaton B. Freeman, a member of the club will deliver "An Easter Message."

"THE JAZZ SINGER," starring Al Jolson, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel. It is based upon the play by Samson Raphaelson.

SYNOPSIS

Cantor Rabinowitz has trained his son, Jakie, to sing the Hebrew songs of the Synagogue. On the Eve of the Day of Atonement he finds Jakie singing ragtime in a "beer garden." He whips the child and Jakie runs away. Ten years elapse. Jakie, now Jack Robin, a jazz singer, down on his luck, meets Mary Dale, a dancer, who obtains a part for him in her vaudeville act. While playing Chicago Mary receives an offer to star in a New York show. Jack is broken-hearted at seeing her leave. Back in the Ghetto it is the Cantor's birthday and his friends bring him gifts.

CHAPTER IX—Continued

"Thank you, thank you, Clarence," Mrs. Rabinowitz took the parcel and examined it eagerly. "The present I'll give him, but the words I could never say. What is it?" she questioned, poking at the bundle with curious fingers.

"I'll show you," Clarence began to open the choir's gift proudly. "See, it's a praying shawl!" He held up the wide scarf.

"A praying shawl! So! Is very nice, Clarence," Mrs. Rabinowitz was examining the material with her fingers. "I'll give—Ssh!" she cautioned. "I hear the Cantor. Quick!" With fumbling fingers the two unwrapped the parcel and hid it in the sideboard drawer just as the Cantor opened the bedroom door and entered the room.

"Mr. Kahn. The Cantor addressed his one-time pupil.

"Good evening, Cantor," Clarence answered, a little confused.

"Well, you came to see me?"

"Ah—well—ah—I—I graduate from City College in a few days her. "See!" She held up the shawl, "this one is Clarence's, and this one from Mr. Yudelson." She spread the shawls out on the table with a loving hand.

"Yudelson's jewelry business must be making lots of money, he should be able to give such nice presents." The Cantor examined the shawls with appreciation.

Mrs. Rabinowitz watched her husband in silence. She started as though to speak, and then stopped.

"Yosele—I—I didn't get you no present, this year," she finally acknowledged.

"You don't have to, Sara," the Cantor put a caressing arm about his wife.

"Well, the true is, I did. But I have to change it." Mrs. Rabinowitz looked up at her husband a little confused. "Would you believe it—I got you a praying shawl, too!"

The Cantor began to laugh. "No, no, Sara, you shouldn't to change it. Now we got enough praying shawls for twenty years." He kissed his wife happily.

"You should wear them in good health, mine teure," Mrs. Rabinowitz exclaimed.

The Cantor began to fold up his shawls carefully and to return them to their paper. He settled his skull cap and reached for his hat.

"Well, I'm going to the Synagogue for a little while, Sara," the Cantor explained. "I want I should wear the praying shawl you give me. Where is it?"

Mrs. Rabinowitz delightedly produced her gift and opened it.

"It's beautiful," the Cantor complimented his wife, shaking out the scarf and putting it about his shoulders. "We'll save the others."

He kissed the mazuzah and opened the door.

"Don't stay too long—everything is on the stove," Mrs. Rabinowitz called after her husband. "Supper will soon be ready."

"Just a little while, Sara," the Cantor returned, closing the door behind him.

Mrs. Rabinowitz once more took up her housewifely duties. But as she heard the Cantor's steps dying away she took a telegram from her bosom and kissed it. Once more she opened it and looked longingly on the wording. Though she was unable to read it, she knew every word by heart. Three weeks it had been since she had heard from Jakie in Chicago, and now this telegram—home in a few days! She kissed the signature lovingly, and then reached up on a high shelf and brought down a vase. From the vase she produced a packet of letters, tied with a little blue ribbon. She untied the package tenderly and placed the wire on the top, and then relit them.

Through the open window came the sound of a hurdy gurdy. An operatic air rolled to a climatic ending and changed to a jazz tune. Mrs. Rabinowitz heard the music and smiled. It sounded so hoisterously happy and fitted to her mood of exultation. She took some pennies from a glass on the sideboard and rolled them up in a bit of paper. She leaned out of the window and threw the little offering into the street. She listened for a while, and then as the organ grinder picked up his music box and moved on, she went back to her cleaning and cooking. And as she moved about she hummed a song.

CHAPTER X

As Mrs. Rabinowitz was busying herself about the kitchen a young man drove up before the house in a taxi. The children in the street hurried forward, crowding around and opening the door, expectant of a few pennies reward. The young man jumped out, bringing with him a travelling bag and a cane. He paid his fare, handed some change to the children and walked briskly into the house. He knocked several times at the Rabinowitz apartment, but when he received no answer he tried the door. It opened and Jack Robin stepped into his old home for the first time in ten years.

Jack looked about him slightly puzzled. It all seemed so real, so familiar, yet so unreal. It was as though he were waking from some kind of strange dream. He set his bag and stick down on a chair, and straightened his tie. But his entrance brought Mrs. Rabinowitz from her kitchen. As she came into the room she stopped dead. Jack turned quickly, and mother and son faced each other. There was a moment's silence. Then—

"Mama! Mama!"

"Jakie! My baby! Mine zindel! My darling!"

Swift as a flash the two were in each other's arms, their voices breaking; smiles and tears coming alternately and together. At last Jack stepped back, holding his mother at arms' length, and gazing at her face.

"Mama. You don't look a day older—just like a chicken." Jack broke the tension with a jest, but his eyes were moist. He led his mother to a chair and gently pushed her into it.
